Nice cards, very cute, suitable for young grandchildren (under 10, I'd say). A number of the cards refer to "grandson" or "granddaughter", which means they're not usable for some people, or troublesome for those who have an uneven mix of grands. Would have been just as easy to make them refer to "grandchild", no? Also, there are a fair number that refer to faith-specific holidays, which means they're not particularly suitable for families not of those faiths.

I purchased this book as a Christmas gift for my mom, the grandmother of my two children. I was pleased with it when it came in the mail, but it was even more fun to watch my mom and son talk about the book after she opened it on Christmas morning. My son loves both sending and receiving mail so when a Grandma gram comes in the mail, he gets so excited. He is always looking forward to when he can send a note to grandma and it really does foster the close relationship my kids have with their grandma. It's especially great since we live halfway across the United States from each other. I love the bond they have and this is one way to encourage communication with my toddler and his grandma.

These are the best ideas for keeping in touch with grandchildren, but most of them could be used to reach out to anyone. These serve my purpose quite well. My grandchildren are in high school and college, and they are so busy that I don't hear much from them. BUT, these handy-dandy postcards produce sufficient guilt that I do hear from them soon after I send one. I'm very careful not to over-do it though, or else they might lose their effectiveness. Anyhow, Love these Postcards!!

They are so cute and the kids love them! This makes it easy for me to stay in touch with my grandkids who live out of the country and in other states. It is something special from grandma!

Our 2 grandchildren (2& 4) have individual mailboxes in their rooms. Fun cards to send every week. They love getting mail.

This is a book of postcards for special and everyday occasions. I love sending them to my grandchildren when school starts, holidays, at the end of school, and mostly when I just miss them. The kids really love getting them, too. They very seldom get mail so they are always very excited to receive their very own mail from Grandma (and there are several from Granddad, too.) Such a wonderful idea!

Got this so my wife could keep in touch with our grandchildren. She was extremely happy with the book and has been using the cards.

So adorable. Beyond what I imagined. I have been looking for a way to stay in touch with my grandchildren. This is certainly one super way. The postcards are beautifully designed with sweet messages on them and plenty of room to write my own message. I wish they had a series. I would buy every one. If you are a grandparent- you've got to get this!
