Norman Bridwell is the author and illustrator of numerous children's books, including the beloved Clifford series, which has over 126 million copies in print, in 13 languages! He lives in Edgartown, MA with his wife Norma. They have two children, son, Tim, and daughter, Emily Elizabeth.

The book has more color and pattern identification than Easter concepts. I would have preferred this as a non-Easter book since it has educational potential. Overall, I wouldn't add it to my Easter collection if I had known a head of time.

Other than Easter egg hunting and painting eggs this book doesn't convey much about Easter but my son (3 1/2) loves the story and Clifford falling into the paint. We've been reading it nightly at his request for weeks!

A BIG HIT

Cute book

My son loves all the Clifford books, and this is a great addition to the collection!

Cute story about Easter eggs for my child who loves Clifford. This book has some funny parts but also is primarily a dream sequence about colors--not sure my 2 year old "gets" the whole dream aspect but he still enjoys the story about coloring and finding Easter eggs.

A big hit with the kids

Wonderful story for the season
