Synopsis

With Sara temporarily on medical leave and Bethany no longer competing with the squad, Nadia is poised to dominate at the Nationals. Or so she thinks. Introducing Raven. Her parents just divorced and according to Google Maps, the Bellevue Kips Gymnastic Club is equidistant from their houses. Split down the middle, just like everything else. Jamie was comfortable being the new kid on the squad, but struggling to find her place on the team now that she is old news. "Jamie felt the pang of something like jealousy. Jamie never got jealous. This felt different. This was already affecting her routine. This affected her dreams. Jamie would have to do some research. She would convince Judi to let her try her own special move. And she would perfect it before Nationals. Because without a truly spectacular dismount, there was no way she was bringing home gold." Will the girls pull it together and place at Nationals or will the drama of competing against your own team-mates leave these gymnasts Flipping Out?

April Adams has spent almost as much time upside down as right side up. As a competitive gymnast she led her University of Alabama team to the top of the podium and although her sights were never on the Olympics, after a degree in creative writing , April went as a journalist to the London games. April loves hiking, baking and spending time with her family in Utah.

I enjoyed reading this in a junk food for the brain kind of way (I'm older than the book's target audience). This would be great for pre-teen and teenage gymnastics fans, and it's very up-to-the-minute in terms of references to music and actual gymnastics competitors (i.e., referencing Gabrielle Douglas). There were a number of problems with the text that a decent editor could have caught, but it's not so glaring that you can't understand what the author is saying.

I read it first and found it easy to follow along even though it was the 3rd book and I never read the other two.. It was a Christmas present for my 11 year old Grand-daughter. She called today and said she would like # 1 & # 2 . I am going to order them for her Birthday.
